RULE SUMMARY

ORS 810.180 authorizes the Department of Transportation to conduct speed zone investigations and set speeds on most public roads, including interstate highways. This rule gives authority to the Department and other road authorities to establish variable speed zones on sections of highway when an engineering investigation and analysis determines that a range of speeds in response to recurring conditions provides for better traffic safety and operation than a single set speed. This rule applies to all public roads except where the Department has delegated its authority to establish designated speeds on low volume or unpaved roads under ORS 810.180(5)(f).
